

Message

From: Shoren Brown, Trout Unlimited [sbrown@tu.org]
Sent: 2/5/2013 6:00:03 PM
To: Hough, Palmer [/O=EXCHANGELABS/OU=EXCHANGE ADMINISTRATIVE GROUP (FYDIBOHF23SPDLT)/CN=RECIPIENTS/CN=51cd0b0d81ac416fa265944d6e6575ce-PHough]
Subject: Bristol Bay in the News February 5, 2013

If you're having trouble viewing this email, you may see it online.

Share This:

Growing support for Bristol Bay's commercial fishery and fishing jobs was featured in newspapers in Massachusetts and Maine this week. The Gloucester Times published a front page story on Bristol Bay fishing captain Katherine Carscallen's meeting with Massachusetts Rep. John Tierney, Gloucester fishermen, and the Massachusetts Fishing Partnership.

The article concluded: "The local fishermen agreed to contact other government officials, and write letters of support for Carscallen and her fight against the Pebble mine and for the Alaskan salmon fishery. Legislators from eight other states have done the same, Carscallen said."

A letter to the editor in the Bangor, Maine paper highlighted threats to Bristol Bay's 130-year old fishery from Pebble Mine's waste and operations. Bristol Bay commercial fisherman and Maine resident Max Hames writes: "While the Environmental Protection Agency is forced to retroactively clean up the Callahan site, it has the opportunity to proactively protect Bristol Bay, its fishery and the native people who call the region home. ... I hope the EPA learns lessons from a superfund site in Maine and applies it to Alaska. About 14,000 commercial fishing jobs, including mine, could be on the line."

And, a blog post about proposed changes to the State of Alaska's Bristol Bay Area Plan describes the pros and cons of the current draft management plan for the region. Lindsey Bloom writes: "While some ground was gained for protecting Bristol Bay, the State's proposal largely fails to take into account the concerns and opinions of local communities and does little to protect wild game, salmon, subsistence, recreation, sport fishing, or other public uses of fish and game in Bristol Bay."

She describes how stakeholders were left out in the cold during the last update in 2005 and urges them to comment on the proposed changes.

For more information, visit www.savebristolbay.org

Shoren Brown

Bristol Bay Campaign Director

Tim Bristol

Trout Unlimited Alaska Director

Sharing concerns for fisheries

Gloucester Times and Eagle-Tribune

James Niedzinski

Fishermen from Gloucester and Alaska fish drastically different areas during different times of the year, but one thing is for certain: They're all in the same boat when it comes to defending and protecting an industry under siege from many sides ... Click here to read more

I, ME, mine

Bangor Daily News

Max Hames

I read with interest the BDN article, "State, federal agencies to update public on cleanup of toxic former mine in Brooksville" on Oct. 19 about the ongoing cleanup efforts at the Callahan Mine site in Cape Rosier. It's particularly troubling that a mine that hasn't produced copper in 40 years is still threatening public health and the environment ... Click here to read more

Changes to Bristol Bay Area Plan fall short; public comments needed now

Save Bristol Bay

Lindsey Bloom

If the term "Bristol Bay Area Plan" rings a bell to Save Bristol Bay Supporters you may remember that in 2009 six Bristol Bay Tribes, the Alaska Independent Fishermen's Marketing Association, and Trout Unlimited Alaska sued the Alaska Department of Natural Resources over its changes to this land use planning document for Bristol Bay ... Click here to read more

Pebble Mine: Qui Bono?

Counter Punch

Keegan Birchfield and Stacy Vega

Pebble Mine is a hot topic today both in Alaska and nationally. Proponents and opponents have spent millions to assess impacts both economically and environmentally, but we shouldn't we take a more holistic approach to impacts? In a best case scenario, Pebble Mine looks to be one of the greatest revenue generating mines in Alaska ... Click here to read more

Bristol Bay Area Plan

Sportsman's Alliance for Alaska

The video below explains the State of Alaska's Bristol Bay Area Plan which was originally created in 1984, revised drastically (in a very bad way) in 2005, challenged in court and because of a settlement agreement between the State of Alaska and the plaintiffs, will be revised in 2013 ... Click here to read more

When it comes to Pebble Mine, here is what's at stake (a Photo essay)

Switchboard Blog

Sylvia Fallon and Jacob Scherr

As Aldo Leopold once pointed out, not everyone makes it to Alaska – just like not everyone makes it to heaven. I am one of the fortunate ones who has been to Alaska and as a result I feel like I've already been to heaven. But Pebble Mine – a massive copper and gold mine proposed at the headwaters of Bristol Bay – threatens to turn this slice of heaven into a pit of hellish destruction ... Click here to read more

Trout Unlimited | 419 Sixth Street, Suite 200 | Juneau, AK 99801

This email was sent to hough.palmer@epa.gov. To ensure that you continue receiving our emails, please add us to your address book or safe list.

manage your preferences | opt out using TrueRemove®.

Got this as a forward? Sign up to receive our future emails.

email marketing by Trout Unlimited powered by emma